Topix declined by 1.4% in local terms over the month while the yen fell sharply against both sterling and the US dollar. Expectations grew that short term interest rates would rise in the UK and US whereas no change is anticipated in Japan.

Economic news was mixed. Weak domestic spending in September reflected Covid restrictions while industrial output fell by 5.4% largely due to a 28% drop in car production. Car companies have been forced to reduce output sharply due to a combination of global semiconductor shortages and Covid related plant suspensions including at suppliers in Vietnam, Malaysia and Thailand.

It is still early in the results season for the first half to the end of September, but so far we have seen fewer positive surprises than the last few quarters. Nonetheless more companies are still revising their guidance up than down; for example, steel manufacturer Yamato Kogyo revised up for the second successive quarter while car parts supplier Tokai Rika revised down.

The outlook, however, looks brighter. The number of new Covid cases in Japan has fallen to only a few hundred per day over the past two weeks after the national state of emergency was ended on 30th September. This, combined with a vaccination rate of over 80% of the adult population, should be positive for domestic demand. Every month Toyota releases forecast production plans for the next three months which currently show a strong recovery. At its low in September, monthly production dropped by 39% to 513,000 units but is expected to rise sharply in October to 850,000-900,000 units with a further increase in November. Toyota cites an easing of the Covid related parts production problems in Asia as the main factor behind the improvement.

The takeover battle between Shinsei Bank and SBI continues. Shinsei's board has said that they would support the bid and consider abandoning their plan for a poison pill if the ¥2,000 bid price is revised to a "sufficient level" and the maximum number of shares for the bid is removed, i.e. not limiting SBI's ownership to 48% of the bank. Elsewhere, Oasis and other shareholders have publicly rejected the takeover offer by ENEOS for Nippo as they believe it does not fully reflect the value of the company.

The clear LDP victory in the election at the end of the month provides political continuity, while the moderate headwinds from semiconductor shortages and Covid restrictions seem likely to ease. Meanwhile the valuations of the fund remain highly attractive. We anticipate further improvements in dividends and share buybacks through the results season next month.
